PRESIDENT HAYES EXPRESSES AN OPINION.

The Act to Prohibit Military Interference Returned to the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, May 12,-The President to-day returned to the House of Representatives the "Act to prohibit military interference at elections," with his objections to its approval.

The President says: "Holding, as I do, the opinion that any military interference whatever at the polls is contrary to the spirit of our institutions, and would tend to destroy the freedom of elections, and sincerely desiring to concur with Congress in all of its measures, it is with very great regret that I am forced to the conclusion that the bill before me is not only unnecessary to prevent such interference, but is a dangerous departure from long settled and important constitutional principles. The true rule as to the employment of military force at elections is not doubtful: no intimidation or coercion should be allowed to control or influence citizens in the exercise of their right to vote, whether it appears in the shape of combinations of evil disposed persons, or of armed bodies of the militia of a State or of the military force of the United States. The elections should be free from all forcible interference and, as far as practicable, from all apprehension of such interference. No oldiers, either of the Union or of the State militia, should be present at the polls to take the place or to perform the duties of the ordinary civil police force. There has been and will be no violation of this rule under orders from me during this administration; but there should be no denial of the right of the National Government to employ its military force on any day and at any place, in case such employment is neressary to enforce the constitution and laws of the United States," Quoting the bill, the President says:
"It will be observed that the bill exempts from the general prohibition against the employment of military force at the polls two specified cases. These exceptions recognize and concede the soundness of the principle that the military force may properly and constitutionally be used at the place of elections when such use is necessary to enforce the constitution and laws. But the excepted cases leave the prohibition so extensive and far reaching that its adoption will seriously impair the officiency of the Executive department of the government.

The President then proceeds to quote the acts of Congress authorizing the use the provisions of which were approved by Washington and Jefferson, and still later by Lincoln, and referring thereto the President says: "At the most critical periods in our history my predeces-Pennsylvania in 1794. In 1806, on the sume principe, Pe ident Je ferson broke up the Burr conspiracy by issuing "orders for the employment of such force, either of the regulars or of the militia, and by such proceedings of the civil authorities as might enable them to suppress, effectually, any further progress of the enterprise.

And it was under the same authority that President Jackson crushed out the nullification in South Carolina, and that Paesident Lincoln issued his call for troops to save the Union in 1861. On numerous other occasions of le significance under probably every administration, and certainly under the present, ihis power has been usefully exerted to enforce the laws without objection by any party in the country, and almost without even attracting any public attention. The great elementary and constitutional princi ple which was the foundation of the original statutes of 1792, and which had been its essence in the various forms it has assumed since the firs adoption, is that the Government of the United States possesses, under the Con stitution, in the full measure and powe of self-protection by its own agencie altogether independent of state au thority, and if need be, against the hostility of State Governments. It should remain embodied in our stat utes unimpaired as it has been from the very origin of the Government. It should be regarded as hardly less valuable, or less sacred than a provision of the constitution itself. are many other important statutes containing provisions that are liable to be suspended, or annulled at the times and places of holding elections, if the bill before me should become a law. I do not undertake to furnish a list of them. Many of them—perhaps the most of them-have been set forth in the debates on this measure. They relate to extradition, the crimes agains the election laws, to quarantine regula tions, to neutality, to Indian reservation to the civil rights of citizens and to other subjects.

In regard to them all it may be safely said that the meaning and effect of this bill is to take from the general Government an important part of its power to enforce the laws. Another grave ob jection to the bill is its discrimination in favor of the State and against national authority. The presence or employment of the army or navy of the United States is lawful under the terms of this bill at the place where an election is being held in a State to uphold author ity of a State Government there, and there in need of such military intervention, but unlawful to uphold the author ity of the Government. The United States then and there in need of such military intervention under this bill the presence and employment of the army or navy of the United States would be lawful and might be neces sary to maintain the conduct of a State election against the domestic violence that would overthrow it, but would be unlawful to maintain the conduct of a national election against the same local violence that would overthrow it. This discrimination has never been attempted in any previous legislation by Congress and is no more compatible with the sound principles of the constitution or to necessary maxims and methods of our system of Government on account of elections than at other times In the early legislation of 1792 and of 1795 by which the militia of the States was the only military power reported to for the execution of the constitutional powers in support of State or National Authority, both functions of the Government were put upon the same footing. By an act of 1807 the employment of the army and navy was au-thorized for the performance of both Constitutional duties in the same terms in all later statutes. On the same subject matter, or same measures of authority, to the government had been accorded for the performance of both these duties.

No precedent has been found in any previous legislation, and no sufficient reason has been given for discriminareason has been given for discrimination in favor of State against National there are hundreds in Kansas who want authority which this bill contains. Un- to return South der the sweeping terms of the bill, the national government is effectually shut out from the right and from the discharge of imperative duty to use its whole executive power, whenever and wherever required, for enforcements of the laws at places and at times where and when its elections are held. The employment of its organized armed forces for any such purpose would be an offense against the law, unless called for by and therefore, upon permission of the authorities of the State in which the occasion arises. What is this but the substitution of the discretion of the State Governments of the United States as to the performance of its own duties? In my judgement this is an abandonment of its obligations by the National Government, a subordination of National authority, and an intrusion of the State supervision over national duties which amount, in spirit and tendency, to State supremacy. Though I believe that the existing statutes are abundantly adequate to completely prevent military interference. With the elections in the sense in which the phrase is used in the title of this bill, and is employed by the people of this country, I shall find ac difficulty in concurring in any additional hegislation limited to that object, which does not interfere with the in-dispensable exercise of the power of the government under the constitution and

The Czar's Own Account of the At-tempt at His Assassination. A St. Petersburg correspondent of the Paris France states that as soon as the Czar had entered the Winter Palace after the attempt had been made to shoot him, he gave orders for all his friends and the high State officials to be admitted to his presence, and repeated to them the event which had just occur red in the following terms: "I was taking my usual walk this morning at 90'clock, and, feeling rather tired, I was about to return to the palace, when I saw coming toward me dong the deserted flags, a good looking young man of about thirty years of age looked at him mechanically as he approached, thinking the while that that man wished to kill me it would be very easy for him to do so. This strange presentiment was all the more inex olicable as there was nothing in the stranger's appearance to suggest his being a conspirator. He were the dress of a clerk in the Finance Department, and his demeanor was perfectly correct As these thoughts were passing through my mind, I saw him put his hand into the pocket of his cloak, take from it a pistol, and aim at me. Instinctively I darted aside. The shot went off and missed me. Just as I was on the point of calling for help a second sho, went off, and thanks to the movement I made to right myself, it likewise missed its aim. I then called for help. Policemen appeared immediately. I walked straight towards the would-be assassin, who stood still a few paces off. His arm seemed suddenly paralyzed. The men rushed at him. He then seemed to re over himself, and fired two more shots, one of which unfortunately wounded one of my preservers, white the other hit the wall near me. At last the wretch was secured and disarmed.

You can not imagine a more polite company, writes a correspondent of the Worcester (Mass.) Spy, than a crowd of Spaniards waiting at the station. No pressing on one another, no confusion; a kindly interest in strangers and deference to those who appear not to understand the language or the customs of the country. A curious instance and illustration of this occurred one day as I was buying the tickets at a city station. They weigh all the gold coin you know, and take nothing on its apparen face value, as we do, without submit-ting it to this test. The hour for the departure of the train had about arrived, the crowd was large, and I had taken my place at the head of the long line of people who wanted to buy tickets. The coin I handed to the ticket agent was one which had been clipped by some Jew, and it took a good while for the ticket seller to weigh it and estimate what deduction should be made from its face value. Do you suppose the crowd pushed and pressed, and denounced the ignorance of the foreigner. is I fear might possibly have been the case in some of our American cities. Not a bit of it. They waited, each in his turn, in the most considerate man ner, vindicating my claim to have but a small deduction made, and showed, instead of impatience, an amount of sympathetic interest which, with us, is apt to be reserved for personal friends

METURNING NEGROES.

A Large Number of Negroes on their way Back to the South from Kansas.

St. Louis, May 8-The steamer Joseph Kinney came in this morning from Kansas City with fifty-two colored peo-ple returning South. They came from Warren county, Mississippi, and presented the appearance of tramps as they filed down to the Steamer James Howard and secured deck passage down the river. They comprised a colony that had left Mississippi for Kansas the fourteenth of March, and after many vicissitudes were returning, broken in pocket and spirit. They had experienced a terrible time in Kansas. They landed at Wyandotte first, then visited Atchison, and had gone from there down to Kansas City, where they Boarded on her return.

Kansas had not proved the country they expected to find. On leaving the South it was with the belief that when Kansas was reached it would be found one of the finest countries and most equable climates under the sun. It had been represented that comfortable houses and homes that comfortable houses and homes those escaped are the Jones brothers awaited them, and that they would only have to announce their intention of remaining to be furnished by the government with teams and farming utensils to till the rich soil, and that there were State warehouses from which provisions would be issued to all untithe first crop was made, harvested a d sold. On their arrival they found everything sadly misrepresented. Winter had not gone, and they were not received with open arms by the Kansans They were oblige to camp out or live in deserted out-buildings, and those who were short of provisions experienced no little trouble in escaping starvation. The inhabitants of that portion of the free State of Kansas began holding indignation meetings as to what was to be lone with the almost hopeless human freight, and this particular colony arrived at the conclusion that they would go back to Vicksburg. Leavenworth thought the idea a good one and then sent them to Kansas City, and the people there assisted them to a slight de gree in obtaining passage down the river. "If they'll jist let this chile go back to Warren county she'll be willin' to die dar," said a venerable old body of the party known as "Aunt Jane." The Senate was addressed by Senaors Windom and Coke. House.-Attention was called by Cox of New York, to a petition presented by McCord, of Iowa, last Saturday, and printed in yesterday's Record, stating hat a longer continuance of the session is fraught with danger to peace, and with disaster to the financial, commercial and other interests of the country The measures inaugurated by Congress threaten revolution, and an attempt to strike down all the safeguards of free and unintimidated ballots, and that this unprofitable session should be speedily terminated. Cox characterzed the printing of the petition as an insuit to Congress, and said that he had objected to it at the time, and therefore t should not have been printed.

A long discussion ensued, Cox insist-ing that the petition should be stricken Conger took the ground that that would be improper, and that the only proper remedy was an expunging of the polition by action of the House, and n order to have that action he insisted that the petition should be read, so that ne could know what he was voting on. The Speaker (after quoting precedents in support of his position) stated that the House had control over the journal, and that he would therefore submit the question to the House. He intimated that if he had his own will about it, he would let the petition stay in the Record for what it is worth. If objection had been noted by the reporter and inserted in the report, the petition could not have been printed in the face of that bjection. Therefore, a correction of the Record, by inserting the objection, yould necessarily exclude the petition. Finally, the question was submitted is to wnether the Record should be

Organizing a New Party.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12 .- Since the recent election a project has sprung up to organize a new party to be called the constitutional party, with the object of electing a legislature and State officers who will proceed to put in force the provisions of the new constitution. Politicians who had sought to obtain the support of the workingmen's party by advocating the new constitution were soundly berated, and it was resolved that the workingmen's party would enter no combina tion, but would fight the contest out no their own line.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Winston and Salem. Winston, May 10. In a cordance with the previously arranged programme, the procession was formed at the public square, in Salem, at 19 o'clock, a. m., promptly, in the following order: Salem Cornet Band, Chariot containing eleven young ladies, representing the Confederate States; carriage conaining the Orator of the day and Chaplain: soldiers of the Confederate army on foot; disabled Confederate soldiers in carriages, Winston Light Infantry; procession of citizens on foot and in arriages. The procession moved up Main stree

o the North of the Court House square and from thence to the Cemetery, where the address was delivered.

The procession was quite large and well conducted, and the number of solliers of the Confederate army was surprisingly large-awakening reminis cences of Confederate days in many hearts as they marched by in files of fours. Strange to say these war-worn veterans kept step to the sound of the drum remarkably well. As the sun went down I got ready for my journey. In capturing several prizes prior to the time I speak of, all of us, more or less, became possessed of clothing, both male and female, and some of the former I now found to be of service to me in doffling my uniform and donning a civilian's dress. The suit did not fit me with the nicety of one purchased from Robinson & Co., but it served my purpose completely and with an immense, broad-brimmed slouch hat, I reported myself to the captain as the clock marked 49, as ready He looked at me approvingly and said, "Captain F. of the Satelite will be here directly with his boat's crew and go on shore with you. On the road we met a negro approaching from the house, and to our query whether "his master was at home,"

he repiied, "Yes, sah."

The house was situate in a large yard, enclosed by a fence, and so soon as we arrived at the gate leading into it, my companion said, "We will have to par here. I am going in the house, and when you see me come out again, go at once to the stable, wherever it is, and I guess you will find an animal there to suit you." The captain then, with his squad of men, left me, entered the nouse, and shortly after reappeared, having a tall white man with them evidently a prisoner, while I quietly rept away toward the rear of the house in the hope of FINDING THE STABLE,

By the light which had been brought o the door with the prisoner, I discovered a couple of negroes, who, so soon as their master-for it was he-had left, came in my direction. When close to me, I hailed them, and though considerably startled, they at once came to me. I told them that "I was an officer of the Union gun-boat at harbor in the river, and desired a horse to ride over to the Charles City road; and, as I did not know the road, would like to have a guide, whom I would pay for his services."
One of the darkies, Passion by name, said: "We only got teben mules in de stable; no hoss; only one, and dat's a mare dat belongs to massah. Nobody else dar ride him. But I'll show you de road, sah!"

We went into the stable, and Passion without scruple, soon had the mare saddled for me, and throwing a bridle over the neck of a mule, we both mounted, the other negro joining the rowd of blacks who had been attracted to the stable by the noise of the conversation. We left the yard and entered upon the road, but had scarcely done so, when we came suddenly across a negro riding a tremendous black mule, between whom and Passion a whispered conversation commenced, but which I summarily checked by telling Passion o "move on." "Dis niggah will go 'long, massah. He knows de road bery good. "Better than you?" I asked.

"Yes, sah!" Go ahead then ! and, mark you, no deceiving me, or I'll bring you down with this !' and I laid my hand on my ong navy revolver, drew it from the olster, and pointed it at them. No more was said, and we journeyed on. As we progressed

ALONG THE ROAD

we met occasionally a man, sometimes white, sometimes black, who was trayeling to see a friend or neighbor, to discuss the news and the rumors of an expected battle to 'ake place next day Sunday), and to advise as to the course to pursue. The battle was to occur near Charles City, and was to be com-menced by the Confederates making an attack upon our lines at that point. In two or three instances windows were hoisted, and females looking out, would inquire of us as we passed— "what news" Will the battle take place to-morrow? Passion, who seemed to be acquainted with every-body, would answer as he thought best or according to my dictation; and there was so much of this talk about a battle that as we neared our journey's end, I was much more watchful, and paid especial attention to the typography of the country, which, by the pale light of the moon, just rising, I noted on paper, to be handed to the Union commander, if I got within the lines.

A SUDDEN ENCOUNTER.

We had traversed a distance of nigh fifteen miles, without encountering single uniform of either color, when upon turning a sharp bend in the road we suddenly came across four horse saddled and accoutred; a man with slouch hat and dark cloak, leaning a the side of one-the others in a body grazing upon the grass on the side of the road—whilst upon the ground close by lay their riders fast asleep. So juietly had we came upon them, that he man standing by the horse did not hear us, until, seeing the uniform of those upon the ground, I uttered an exclamation of surprise, and sharply wheeling my animal, told my guides to 'put!" which they at once did, and we ill dashed off toward the Chickahominy. The man by the horse fired a shot after us, and loudly giving the command, "Mount!" the entire party were scon thundering after us. I always had prior to that night the utmost contempt for the SPEED OF THE MULE,

My guides invariably kept no less than fifty yards in advance, and though the swift and gallant little animal I bestrode did her very best in running, she could not decrease the distance, though she fairly flew. I lay low upon the holster of my saddle, occasionally turning, re-volver in hand, expecting a shot from my pursuers, but they did not fire any more, their only object being apparently to capture us without hurt. entered upon a long tangent in the road and then by the dim light of the moon I discovered my pursuers to be several hundred yards in the rear. My guides and I were going at a fearful rite, but the road was generally good, mostly sand, and but little hilly. There was no road that we could cross that would take us direct to the James river, or I should have struck it and endeavored to reach our lines. My guides were, of course, aware of this, and so they urged their mules to the utmost on our retrogade journey. We increased the distance from our pursuers slowly, but surely. Doubtless, as we got away from their lines more and more, they advanced with greater caution, not knowing but that it might be an ambuscade into which they were being led. GOT AWAY.

As it was, after being chased several miles, the pursuit was abandoned, a pleasant fact that we soon knew, and the speed of our animals was slackened accordingly, the banks of the Chickahominy being reached shortly after daylight.

My mare was placed in the stables from which I took her, and then going to the river shore, I hailed my vesse!; a boat came at once for me, and I was soon aboard. I reported immediately to the captain, and told him of the failure of my mission, with all the cir-cumstances attending. He had no reproof to make, but warmly congratulated me upon my escape. It was an escape, for later I was convinced of the fact that if I had been captured in the civilian dress, with the tell-tale papers thirty-four mile ride that night laid me up for three days. In my berth I lay, blessed with a good appetite and with all my wits about me, but with a back so stiff and so painful that years will not efface the remembrance of that

Witness. The preliminary meeting of the citiizens of Wilkes county, in the interest of the Yadkin Valley Railroad was held n Wilkesboro on the 5th of May. Dr. Harrill read a letter just received he Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad, stating the condition of the road and assuring our people that exection on their part would bring forward rapidly this road.

Dr. Tyre York explained the several Railroad bill's passed by the last Legis-lature—showing the several chances within reach for a road. Dr. York spoke at length of the importance of activity among our people in order to onsumate this great work.

A permanent organization was fected by electing Dr. R. F. Hackett Chairman, and W. F. Porter and Will W. Barber Secretaries.

The first Monday in June was agreed upon as a day for a Massmeeting in Wilkesboro, when prominent men from along the proposed line of the road will address the people.

MEMORIAL DAY.

ITS CELEBRATION IN RALEIGH ON YESTERDAY.

Graham Haywood---The Graves of the Gallant Bend Garlanded.

Yesterday was the time we, of the South, love to keep green in remembrance by its celebration, and the 10th of May, as the day on which the soul of the loved, the immmortal Jackson passed to its rest, has the first place in our hearts. Coming as it does in the most beautiful month, it is meet that Spring's sweetest gifts, the flowers, should bear so large a part in its ceremonies, and that these beautiful emblems of loveliness should deck the graves of the loved and lost. The lapse of time in no wise lessens the love of Memorial Day in the Southern heart, which will ever observe it with a fond and tender care. Yesterday was bright and beautiful, nature in full burst of leaf and flower, and Raleigh's fairest and best thronged the resting place of the soldier dead, to pay their tribute to the memory of these heroes of the Lost Cause.

The procession was formed on Fay-etteville street, near Martin, and took up the line of march for the cemetery at 4 o'clock, p. m., in the following or-of the Day in a carriage. Citizens in carriges. To the slow notes of the funeral march the procession passed up Fayetteville street, the troops with arms reversed, and thence proceeded by the usual route to the beautiful cemetery of Oak-wood, under the shadows of whose stately oaks rest the mortal remains of the Conféderate dead. The sun's rays beat down strongly, and black rolling clouds threatened rain, but none fell to mar the ceremony.

On arrival at the grounds a detach-

On arrival at the grounds a detachment of the Raleigh Light Artillery was found posted at the south gate. The procession passed in at this gate, the Chief Marshal, the orator and the chaplin taking seats in the stand on the central mound, which was handsomely decorated with flowers and evergreens, and was shaded by a white canopy. The grounds were filled with a large crowd, omposed in a great part of ladies and children, each bearing flowers in their hands or in baskets. Amid a hush the Chaplin of the day, Rev. W. S. Black, of the Edenton street Methodist church, rose and offered an eloquent and impressive prayer, in which he invoked blessings upon the heroic dead and the living as well. 'After the band had rendered a sweet air, the orator of the day, Col. Ed. Graham Haywood, was introduced, and began the memorial address which he had been chosen by the ladies to deliver. The address, which was of about an hours length, was lusions to that past of which North Carolinians are so justly proud. He spoke of the labors and love of the dead, who had yielded up their battered shields only after the sorest struggle the world has ever seen. Not Salamis, not Thermopylae, not the Alamo, has seen purer fountains of patriotism than welled up in the Southern breasts, and ou, troops at Gettysburg were more gallant than the six hundred at Balak'ava. The strength of our armies was never broken in battle; no crowning victory like that of Waterloo, gilded the banners of the foe. Year after year with bloody welcome, they received the enemy, and were only themselves wasted by the silent but powerful process of attrition. Who shall ever know the full measure of the slow sickness, heart-breakings, famine and danger of those days of trial. the end came, and our people who had staked their all upon the die, lest. The result cannot give to the South a thought of shame or to the North a boast of pride. Our noble soldiers lived to il-iuminate the sentiment of Lee, that 'human virtue is superior to calamity. Without hope, they proved as faithful in the hour of disaster as in that of success. Referring to the end of the strug-gle, the speaker beautifully said: "Let us bow without question or murmur to the inscrutable decrees of Him who fills the ages with His mighty works, and out of the wrecks of old societies volves ar ew." The address was listened to with special attention and was regarded as an effort of unusual eloquence, well worthy the distinguished orator. After the band had played the "Sweet Bye and Bye," the chaplain had pronounced the benediction, and the throng dispersed to deck the graves.

The Raleigh Light Infantry, under command of Capt. Jno. R. Ferrall, and Lieutenants Jno. T. Pullen, Robt. I. Williams and John T. Sherwood, fired three volleys over the graves, while the section of the Raleigh Light Artillery, under command of second Lieu-tenant J. A. Harris, fired a salute of eleven guns. The graves were all decorated, some receiving special attention. Among these were the graves of Jno. M. Miller. of the 14th. N. C. S. T., decorated by his old comrates in arms; that of Frank Ramsey, killed at Gettysburg, some survivors of Manley's Battery; and that of Gen. Geo. B. Anderson, killed at Gettysburg, and that of St. Walsh, the Texas cavalryman who fired at Kilpat rick on Fayetteville street.

VANCE'S SPEECH ... THE SILVER QUESTION.

The speech made by Hon. R. B. Vance in the House last week on the silver bill is before us. It was an extemporaneous effort, and does credit to the heart and head of that faithful and zealous representative.

The speech is not burthened with statistics, nor is it valuable as a document for reference. But with a rapid money, with a few appropriate allusions to the use and value of silver in the days of Abraham and Jacob, he treats the questions from a practical and common-sense stand point, adapting the Wilmington Sun. discussion to the necessities of the situation. Speeches on financial questions are, of necessity, usually tedious and dry. We believe that upon the question of finance and a deep desire for a restoration of friendship between the sections of this government, Gen. Vance has expressed the sentiments of ninetenths of the Southern people.

No good reason has been given or can be given for the demonitization of silver. We seek in vain for good results from the act. It was consumated as a part of that financial scheme of the leaders of the Republican party, when in the zenith of their power, which has resulted in making a few men very rich and bankrupting the millions; which has filled the coffers of national banks at the sacrifice and destruction of the laboring men of the land; which has enabled a few men to gather up and horde the money of the country, that they might the better be able to command the working man's labor and buy up his property for less than one-fourth its value.

Does it not strike the minds of the people as wonderfully strange, that without a movement from and by the people from any quarter of the country, suddenly and unexpectedly, their representatives should destroy and dishonor millions of their money by de claring that silver should no longer pass current as money? It was done so quietly that for a while the people could not believe or realize silver was no longer money, and ceased to have a money value. Like a clap of thunder from a clear sky, the startling fact burst upon the people, and the question was everywhere heard, "What does this mean?" In the greatest silver producing country on the face of the earth, the National Legislature had followed the example of England, which had no silver, and destroyed by one act, millions; yes, billions of glittering wealth that God, in his wisdom and goodness had, with such a kind stupid. The Secretary of the Treasury, John Sherman, is reported to have said a few days ago, before the committee on coinage, weights and measures, that the act remonetizing silver was a great blunder. And yet, this same Mr. Sherman reported the bill in the Senate and it received the support of the entire Republican party. And though it is now by its inventors admitted to be a blunder, still every effort to repeal the act and restore silver money to its proper place, as par money, is opposed by this same Republican party and these same leaders; and, by the party lash, they have, up to this time, been able to defeat any bill to re-establish the standard of bi-metallic currency. The Democrats made the effort in the XLIVth Congress, but were insuccessful by reason of Republicae. opposition. Again, in the XLVth Congress, th. Democrats made another effort, and though the bill finally passed, and became a law by a two-thirds vote over the President's veto, yet it was so altered that it does not restore silver to its full value as money, and though accomplishing much good, further legislation is necessary to restore the bi-metallic standard of our fathers. With free and unlimited coinage of silver. with the same privileges and immunities of gold as to seigniorage, etc., and a long step will have been taken towards the revival of prosperity.

WE print in the NEWS, this morning the first part of a series of "biographical sketches of leading men of North Carolina," from the ready pen of that patriotic and devoted son of North Carolina, John H. Wheeler. These sketches will appear in subsequent issues of the News, and will constitute a valuable and entertaining feature of our Sunday edition. The distinguished biographer himself is the subject of our next sketch, which has been prepared by the

AN EDITOR'S VIEWS. During the last twenty years journalism has become prominent, if not pre-• ninent, as a profession. The press is to-day the most potent agency for good or evil, and editors far more than statesmen, are the guides of current opinion. Daniel Defoe, William Cobtet. Douglas Jerrold, Charles Dickens, Leigh Hunt, Horace Greeley, the Bennetts, H. J. Reymond, William Seaton Hallock. Before these great journalists were Swift, "Junius" Samuel and John Adams, Gay, Madison and other political writers. And since their time Jennings, Godkin, Parke Godwin, Dana, Reid, Watterson, White. Sam Bowles, Warrenton Marble. In North Carolina, William W. Holden of the old Raleigh Standard, Fulton, of the old Wilmington Journal an i Yeats, of the Charlotte Democrat. Journalism is the first power in the land. The pulpit, the platform, and the schoolhouse are subordinate to it. The press of the country is its hope, its prophet, and its guardian. Woe betide press, and nation, too, if it fails of its opportunity and trust.

These reflections have been suggest ed by reading in the Charlotte Observer of a late date an address delivered before the Chamber of Commerce of that city, by Charles R. Jones, the editor of the Observer. Mr. Jones has found time from the arduous and exacting duties incident to editing a daily newspaper to prepare an exhaustive disqui.

sition on the subject of commercial reform. He has treated his subject in a practical, rather than a philosophical spirit-with strong, rather than infalliele logic. He talks as he writes, on a evel with the heads of the public. Mr. Jones is just now in the prime of a vigorous intellect. We have not the space to reproduce the address.

THE DEFEATED PRIZE-FIGHTER.

Elliott Badly Used Up-A Possibility of His Death.

ERIE, Pa., May 8.—On the return from he prize-fight Elliett was taken to Jacob Geib's dwelling here, and Dr. spencer was called. Examination showed a badly bruised face an a severe contusion on the left side. His eyes were entirely closed by swelling. At least five ribs on the left side were ractured, and there was a severe conusion in the region of the heart, caused by a terrible right-handled cross-couner in the first round and by the falling of Dwyer upon him, striking there with his knee. The right side has also ugly ornises, and Elliott thought that some of the ribs on that side were fractured also. The physician ascertained that respiration produced coughing as well is pain, which would indicate internal injuries. Elliott was very confident of whipping Dwyer previous to the fight, and he told his backer that he was never in such a fine condition in his life. He said that no novice in the world could stand the ghost of a show with him; he was sure to win. On being asked how he came to lose in so short a time, he said that Dwyer hit him in the left side in the first round, and in the third round he received a right-hand blow on the nose, which he thought had staved his ace in. Elliott said he never recovered from these two blows. "Besides," he said, "I have been near-sighted from a shild, and after these two hits I was learly blind and could not see Dwyer. At noon to-day Eiliott was dangerously di, and the boys were afraid that he might die. To-night he felt better, and was taken to the cars for home.

Hayes' Dilemma.

The question as to whether Hayes will veto the anti-bayonets-at-the-polls pill was often asked last evening, and he answers were equally "Yes" and 'No' among the correspondents. We have heretofore said that he would not eto the Army appropriation bill, beause he was not a fool. He did veto, and consequently our opinion under he circumstances precludes even a prognostication. We can simply say we hope he will veto. We will applaud aim if he does; because should he do so he issue for 1880 will be made up—i. e. the Radical party demands troops and Dayonets at the polls in order to control and intimidate. Vive la veto.

The Next Presidency. Washington Capital.

After a night's series of interviews ve find that public sentiment generally digested divides the question of the Presidency between Grant and Tilden. with a growing sentiment in favor of Thurman.

A canvass of the Republican members of Pennsylvania exhibits the fact that that State is dead set in favor of Grant, Colonel Bayne of Alleghny said last night: "Grant is undoubtedly our candidate. And still further, will be elected. Tilden will be the Democratic nominee and be defeated."

Mr. Fisher of the western district o the Keystone State expressed a simila ment; and handsome Harry White of the Kiskemetas, when addressed of the subject said: "Certainly it will be Frant, and he will be elected. Sherman will not be the nominee. He will grow ap in the delegation, but will be left. n't mean to say that I am strenuous! a Grant man, but I believe he will b ie man of our party, and know that he will carry all before him."

After handsome Harry has edited such nkase the affair is settled. Hon. Ned Overton is not so positively emphatic: "I think Grant will be our nominee. It fact, I feel assured he wil unless some revolution of sentimen sets in by which Secretary Sherman will be nominated. It is one or the other, with the heaviest odds in favor of Grant.

"But could Sherman carry the elec-"Of course he could, Either will do so. You Demograts are nowhere. We felt like suggesting, "Like hell we ain't!" But refrained, as Overton

s re'igious. General Shellenbarger acquiesces in the general sentiment of Pennsylvania pilgrim patriots, and is for Grant. And so are the rest, and their sisters and their cousins and their aunts. In the meantime the Democrats la oack and await results, and laugh lov and chuckle, believing religiously the old defined and brainy idea, that he laughs best who laughs last.

CORNY VANDERBILT.

Secret That Has Come to Belong to Everybody---The Wisdom of William H. in Closing the Case.

ecial Dispatch to the Courier-Journal. NEW YORK, May 10 .- There is much unprinted gossip in this city over the recent settlements in the Vanderbilt family litigation and the disingenuous attempts to make the same redound to he credit of Wm. H. Vanderbilt. From trustworthy source, to-day, your correspondent learned the following facts: That the discontinuance of the suits was a compromise agreed upor beforehand, and that Wm. H. Vanderbilt was obliged to accept it to prevent his cross-examination by Mr. Scott Lord, Cornelius Vanderbilt's counsel. The latter had warned the millionaire, Wm. H., that he must expect a rigid and penetrating inquiry into his private affairs, and must not only tell how much he was worth, but also what speculations he had gained money in and in what ventures he had lost money since the death of his father. Wm. H could not stand this opening up money bags under the eyes of the greedy Wall-street sharks, and he is iderstood to have said that he was willing to give a million dollars rather than have that done. The rest was only he matter of tinesse. Cornelius was perfectly willing to say that he discontinued the suits at his own free will, and that his brother William had paid him a larger share of the estate out of pure magnanimity, and Mr. Scott Lord was perfectly willing to say that all he knew about the case was that his client had instructed him to discontinue the suits. But since Cornelius has got his pay up old debts, among them the reeley debt, and his expenses in th itigation, he has told the secret of th ettlement to a few confidential friends who in turn have confided it to other confidential friends, until now it is the secret of a large number of persons, and nav as well be the secret of the reader f the Courier-Journal. Mr. Scott Lore eceived for his services a clean $100.00 the largest fee paid in the case. I may be added that the total wealth the Vanderbilt estate has been greatl exaggerated, and it is said that it wi fall short of the original estimate b bout four millions of dollars.

Thugs in a Theatre. There was a disgraceful scene Wedesday night at Niblo's Garden, New York, where the "Black Crook" is be ing played. A well dressed party of men, who occupied a private box. aused considerable disturbance by ad bressing insulting remarks to the cory hees. In the course of the play one of the party went on the stage and pu is arm around the neck of one of the "Ulm Sisters," Kiralfy interfered and ejected the intruder from the stage. About 11 o'clock, when the grand Am azon march was in progress, one of th men in the box offered a grossly insult ing remark to Belle Howitt. The word were heard all over the house. Miss Howitt immediately ordered the ma neuvering Amazons to come to a halt. The wildest excitement prevailed or and off the stage. Three officials wer to the box and ordered the fellows t leave. The latter became abusive an violent. Finally, when threatened wit arrest, they reluctantly took their de parture and quiet was restored. When ie man who had insulted one of the Im sisters was being driven off the stage, he seized a ballet girl and kissed her in view of the audience.

received a classical education; studied law, and was licensed to praclied. The lunch counter is supplied This first appearance on the political age, in which he was destined to perith all kind of delicacies.

in a prominent part was as a member he Convention of 1835 to amend the e Constitution found in 1776. This an admirable school for a young m n, just then twenty-four years old, taking his first lessons in political knowledge; for the master minds of State, as Macon, Gaston, Branch, Daniel Outlaw, Carson, Spright, Gilliam, Fisher, Morehead, Meares, Rayner, and others were members of this illustrious body. How well Mr. Biggs improved this golden opportunity, his subsequent success in political life, fully demon-

In 1840 came "the Log Cabin Campaign;" when overwhelming adversity befel the democratic party, to which Mr. Biggs early attached his faith and from which he never wavered. e was elected to the Legislature.

"Rari nantes in vasto gurgite," and here he evinced such sagacity and statesmanlike qualities that gave him prominence and influence. The proposed adverse to the views of many of his party, a system of Internal Improvements-the chief feature of which was the construction of a Railroad from the Mountains to Beaufort harbor, at the expense of the State; with colateral branches to be made by individual tnterprise. Had this plan been adopted, our Railroad system would not present any conflict of interest or confusion of routes, all of which now exist, tending to swell the commerce and importance of other States.

He was re-elected in 1842, and in 1844 was elected to the State Senate. In 1845
he was elected a member of (XXXIX) ongress, succeeding the Hon. Kenneth Rayner, who declined a re-election, and defeating the Hon. David Outlaw, who in turn defeated him in the next (XXX)

Congress (1847-49).

He was appointed with B. P. Moore and R. M. Saunders, to revise the laws of North Carolina, which work is a monument to all time, of his ability, patience, labor and learning. In 1854 he was elected a member of he Senate from Martin county. He opposed the measures advocated by iov. Graham and others to call a conention (Constitutional), by a simple pajority of the Legislature; and although the measure was advocated by the prestige and power of the ablest of the whig party, it was defeated. He was the acknowledged leader of the Democratic party in this body, and by this Legislature was elected a member of the Senate of the United States Congress, in the place of Hon. George E.

Here in this body of the Patres Con scripti of the nation, Mr. Biggs earned the reputation of being a useful, laborius member, always at his post of duty. eliable and consistant. This elevated osition he resigned in 1858 to accept he position of United States District udge, made vacant by the death of udge Poster, who had held this place more than half a century.* For this osition Judge Biggs was peculiarly ualified, by his clear common sense and his association with his fellow citizens, by which he was familiar with their interests, views and opinions; by is deep and varied learning, his pa ient research and unsulfied integrity When the civil war came on he em parked his fortunes in the cause of his native land and resigned his commission as United States Judge, and ac ented an appointment of a similar char cter under the Confedera y.

During the troubled times of the war. ne (with his family) was a refugee at l'arboro. After the war closed he re urned to his home and practice.

Having been one of the Bar who gned a protest against the partizan onduct of members of the Supreme Court in the Presidential campaign of 868 and in consequence, was debarred from the practice by order of the court | alone, the fe t outraged by such oppression and judicial (yranny, and removed from the State. He settled in Norfolk, Va., and united in a law partnership with that the only genuine, pure bock beer Hon. W. N. H. Smith, now Chief Juston sale in this city is the lion brewery, Raleigh. Judge Biggs became a part-ner in the mercantile firm of Kedar, Biggs & Co. There in this new yocation Judge Biggs showed the same tirling qualities of probity, caution, endurance in labor, sagacity, combined with prudence, that he had shown at he Bar, or in the Senate chamber and on the Bench. He was much esteemed for Two hundred and fifty pounds of live enterprise and public spirit, and was geese feathers. They are nice and will in active member of the Board of Trade of Norfolk. While attending to his ercantile duties at his store house on he 6th of March, 1878, he was suddenly truck with a disease of the heart, which n spite of all the skill of science and are of affection, he died the same evening to the regret of his numerous friends and his affected family. He eft six children; one of whom is Capt. William Biggs, editor of the Oxford

Judge Biggs was a fair specimen of a North Carolina gentleman; solid rather than showy in his acquirements modest in his demeanor and opinions out firm and tenacious when he believed that he was right. As a statesmar he was pure and patriotic. "All the ends he aimed at was his country's, his God, and truth."

As an orator he did not aspire to rank with the Clays, Calhouns or Websters, of the Senate, but his speeches were replete with sound sense and practical wisdom; and listened to with respect and attention. Whatever position occupied, he filled the measure of its responsibility, always equal to, never above or below his duty. As a gentlenan, he was always affable. respected the rights and feelings of others, he was tenacious and jealous of his own, and resented with "that chas ity of honor" the slightest imputation on his character. As a parent and husband he was affectionate and provident and as a Christian, he was for years a consistent and devout member of the Baptist (Primitive) church and died in that faith.

The Celebrated Seven Springs Inron and Alum Mass.
This is decidedly the most useful, besides being the most efficient Family Medicine ever placed within the reach of any people. Its reputation extends tar and wide, and its great popularity is due entirely to its own merits. For relieving Sick and Nervous Headache it may be truly said, to have no equal. Dyspeptics find it just the remedy for their troubles. Mothers and daughters have long since discovered in its use a "panacea" for their worst ills; and now we have the testimonies of two effects in other more dreaded and roublesome diseases. Rev. John F. Mayne, Theological seminary, Columbia, S. C., writes; Am afflicted with that terrible disease, 'Diabetes;' am using the 'Seven Springs Mass' with a considerable degree of relief; is the only remedy I have yet found to suit my case; want to continue its use until a cure is effected if possiie.
